Painfully, slowly, a message is tapped on a dungeon wall. It's a familiar message—one heard a thousand times over in a dozen countries of Europe and Asia.
LISTEN . . . it's a message of lost hope, of lost rights and freedoms!
LISTEN . . . for this message is a warning for those of us who still are free!

We in America are willingly giving up some of our rights and freedoms—temporarily. As the price of rearming, we're giving government vast powers over our plans, our businesses, our very lives.

The danger is that these powers may become permanent. There are people—in and out of government—who say they should—even though that means a socialistic U.S.A.

Unless all of us remember the difference between temporary emergency powers and permanent socialism, it may some day be "too late" for Americans, too!

Homemakers' Items

Save time, patience and temper when you get ready to hang clean curtains by wrapping a piece of cardboard foil over the curtain rod. It slips through the curtain without catching in the material.

Use an old tooth brush to untangle the fringe on place mats, napkins and guest towels.

Glue several rubber washers to the bottom of your dish pan with waterproof airplane glue. The pan remains steady while in use, and there is less danger of scars and scratches to the sink.

Don't throw away odds and ends of soap. Dry them thoroughly, then run them through the fine blade of the food chopper. You will have a fine powder for use in the dish pan.

A referee's whistle can be a real help to a busy housewife. Use it to call the children from play, or your husband to answer the phone. You may want to work out a signal for each member of the family.

Inexpensive and easily cared for table mats can be made from washable wallpaper. Use a pattern that harmonizes with your dishes. Mats may be scalloped, curved at the corners, or plain rectangular shape.

Cheaper by the dozen may be good advice most of the time, but it is not the price of a dozen eggs but the price per pound that really counts. A dozen pullet eggs may weigh only about three-fourths as much as a dozen large eggs. And the only way the homemaker can find out which size is the best buy is to compare the price per pound of the various sizes.

For a different touch for cool drinks—try some of these suggestions.

For festive occasions, frost glasses by dipping the top rim of the glass to a depth of 1-4 inch in water or lemon juice, then in granulated sugar. Put the frosted glasses in the refrigerator to chill until ready to use.

Another cool trick for lemonade or fruit drinks is to freeze juice cubes, such as grape, raspberry, or loganiberry juice, in the refrigerator tray. These colorful cubes will add sparkle and flavor to the warm weather beverages—as well as a few sprigs of fresh mint in the glass.

Richmond, July 18.- Directors of the Virginia Travel Council have voted to request the forthcoming Virginia General Assembly to name a Commission to study and recommend adequate plans for the observance in 1953 of the 350th anniversary of the founding of Jamestown by the first permanent English settlers to the New World. The recommendation came from the legislative committee of the Council which also asked that the Assembly make unconditional a $300,000 state advertising appropriation annually in the future.

The legislative committee, headed by L. K. Baber, of Richmond, the president of the Automobile Club of Virginia, pointed out that the event should be of international significance and that the first free legislative assembly in the New World met at Jamestown, and that this body should take the leading part in planning for the observance.

The Assembly at its last session voted $297,500 annually for state advertising, but made $150,000 conditional. George Summerson, of Bristol, president of the Council, said the organization's objective will be to obtain the fund in unconditional form in the future.

Quality Milk Im Summer

Produce quality milk .. and you will keep sales at the maximum level this summer.

That's the advice to Virginia dairy farmers given by Guy Nargotte, associate dairy husbandman at V. P. I.

Here are some specific suggestions:

Milk clean cows. Cows should be washed thoroughly over the udder and flanks with a hot sanitizing solution to remove all dirt and loose hair that may find its way into the milk.

Use clean sterile equipment. Clean and sterilize all equipment immediately after milking. Then before the next milking, rinse again with a sanitizing solution.

Cool quickly. Strain milk through single-service pads and cool quickly to 50 degrees F. or lower if possible.

Prevent off flavors. Most off flavors, which do more to cut milk sales than any single item, come from feed eaten before milking. When garlic is abundant, it is well to take the herd off pasture three or four hours before milking.

Poultry Cul'ing

The price of feed for laying birds is high, and the price of eggs is seasonally low, but you will make a profit if you keep production at a high level. So says the county agent, who points out that the surest way of maintaining high egg production is to "cull the non-producers."

The price of old hens has advanced since April and likely will not go much higher, and since the fall laying flock should be made up largely of pullets, the older birds should be disposed of as they go out of production. If you don't have enough pullets to fill the laying house, you will find it profitable to keep a few of your best layers. The best layers are those that continue to lay during the spring and summer.

It isn't hard to tell a layer from a non-layer. Some of the symptoms of the non-layers are: dull, dry, scaly comb; yellowish face; thick skin underlaid with fat; contracted hard fleshy abdomen; and shrunken, puckered, dry vent.

Subscription rate: $2.00 a year; payable in advance.

Fishing in Trout Streams

According to I. T. Quinn, executive director of the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries, the wardens of Virginia will attend a one week school program at the Virginia Polytechnic Institute this summer.

The Commision's program for the wardens will consist of discussions, lectures, instruction and demonstrations on the various techniques and problems of the Commission. Representatives of each of the Commission's five divisions will be on hand to aid in carrying out the program.

Instruction will consist of lectures on law enforcement techniques, first aid and life saving demonstrations, map making, pistol instruction and firing, restocking; and related problems, fish and game division problems, a discussion on the national forest program and our "Cooperative Farm Game" Program, a lecture and discussion on the activities and problems of the education division, and a discussion of the latest wildlife research activities.

M. Wheeler Kesterson, chief of the law enforcement division, will lead a question and answer session on law enforcement in Virginia.
